Giffords makes appeal for gun control

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a dramatic appeal, wounded former Rep. Gabrielle Giffords urged Congress on Wednesday to enact tougher curbs on guns, saying, "too many children are dying" without them. "The time is now. You must act. Be bold, be courageous, Americans are counting on you," she told the Senate Judiciary Committee at Congress' first gun control hearing since 20 elementary school children were shot to death in Newtown, Conn., late last year. Gifford was not on the list of witnesses released in advance of the hearings, and in an unusual show of respect, members of the committee greeted her warmly outside the hearing room as she and her husband, former astronaut and retired Navy Capt. Mark Kelly, made their way inside. The former Democratic congresswoman was grievously wounded in an assassination attempt in Tucson, Ariz., a little more than two years ago, and has become a public advocate for gun control. In the aftermath of the Newtown, Conn., massacre, President Barack Obama has issued a call for gun control legislation. California Sen. Dianne Feinstein, a Democrat and member of the committee, has introduced a bill to ban numerous assault-style weapons as well as high-capacity ammunition magazines. The prospects for Senate passage are not strong, in part because of opposition from the NRA and in part from a reluctance among rural-state Democrats to support limitations on firearms. Republicans pledged to

911 Center losing money on cellphone surcharge

By Frank Boyett

The migration of people from landline telephones to cellphones is hurting the coffers of the local 911 Center at a time when it needs major upgrades, according to Mayor Steve Austin.

In speaking Wednesday to the City-County Study Committee, he recommended changing the way people help support the center, which is currently through a surcharge on phone bills. But the problem, he said, is that the local center gets much less for a cellphone than it does for a landline. "Everybody is not paying an equal share for 911 service," he said. "We collect $2.50 a month for every landline for any citizen in this county. But we only collect 70 cents for cellphone lines, and the state collects that and gives us only 40 cents. So every time somebody switches from a landline to a cellphone, we lose $2.10" per month.

He suggested placing the surcharge on the water bills — both city water bills and bills sent out by the Henderson County Water District — so that the same amount could be charged for all phone customers. "Our 911 system is going to have

Fine arts center hosts educational activities

A traveling exhibit with Italian roots will call the Henderson Fine Arts Center home for the next six months.

"The Wonder of Learning: the hundred languages of children" exhibit is part of a host of upcoming activities in Henderson that will educate people about the Reggio Emilia Approach to education. More than 300 people from 10 states are registered to attend a two-day professional development seminar held Friday and Saturday at the local fine arts center to learn about the education method.

The Reggio Emilia Approach is not exactly a curriculum, but more of a way of thinking about how children are taught, said Terry Green, co-chair of the Ohio Valley Collaborative, one of many organizations that has worked to bring the exhibit and activities to Henderson.

"What we teach children influences society in general," Green said.

U.S. economy shifted into reverse late last year

By Christopher S. Rugaber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy shrank unexpectedly late last year, a reminder of the biggest threat it faces in 2013: sharp government spending cuts and prolonged political budget fights.

A plunge in defense spending helped push the economy into negative territory for the first time since mid-2009. The contraction in the October-December quarter came in at an annual rate of 0.1 percent, according to a government estimate released Wednesday.

The likelihood of another recession appears remote. The economy is forecast to grow around 2 percent this year as strength in areas like housing and auto sales could partly offset government cutbacks. Investors appear unfazed, too: The stock market has surged more than 6 percent this year and is nearing an all-time high.

But economists warn that further spending cuts would weaken a still-precious recovery.

"One way or the other, government is going to be a constraint

Informational meeting offered today for proposed Green River Road widening

Gleaner staff

Property owners on Green River Road will have an opportunity this afternoon to get detailed information about the planned widening of the road, which is scheduled to begin in March and wind up in October.

The project calls for rebuilding the approximately half-mile of road between Osage and Woodspoint drives.

The driving lanes will be widened to 11 feet and curbs and gutters will be added.

Furthermore, there will be an 8-foot-wide path on the side of the street where the houses are located. That path will be for the use of both pedestrians and bicyclists.

Existing right of way will be used, except for a few small areas, although during construction temporary easements will be needed.

About 22 property owners will be affected, although only a handful of them will be asked to grant permanent easements. Those easements will be sought in February.

Today's informational meeting will run from 4 to 6 p.m. at Bend Gate Elementary School, where detailed plans will be available for viewing.

School bus clips pole; no injuries reported

Gleaner staff

A school bus attempting to make a tight turn clipped a utility pole at the corner of Meadow and Washington streets Wednesday afternoon.

No one was injured, but the bus and pole had minor damage, said Keegan O'Daniel, director of transportation for Henderson County Schools.

There were 41 East Heights Elementary School students on the bus when it hit the pole at about 2:50 p.m.

As a precautionary measure, another bus was brought in to finish the route, he said.

Insight boosts cable prices

By Carol Wersich
wersichc@courierpress.com

If you have noticed a jump in your Insight bill, the cable and communications provider cites increased operating and programming costs for it.

"We must adjust the prices of some of our services," said Mike Hogan, spokesman for Time Warner Cable, which owns Insight.

According to Hogan, basic service rates have remained unchanged for more than five years while programming and operating costs have gone up every year.

"Fuel, power and programming fees are examples of rising costs that influence the pricing of our services.

"Rising programming costs continue to be the biggest reason we have to adjust our rates."

Hogan said some networks want customers to pay as much as 300% more to enjoy their favorite shows.

"When programming costs rise, it impacts our customers' bills. The price changes help to offset these increases, but we also absorb as much of the rising programming and operating expenses as we can.

"The majority of our cable customers will not see a programming service increase at this time, because they are benefitting from a promotional offer or package deal."

Hogan said there are no price changes for many of Insight's products, including high-speed Internet service, phone service, premium channels and Digital Channel packs.

"Customers who are concerned about their new prices should review the wide variety of combo packages and options we offer," Hogan said.

"Our representatives will be happy to talk with them about options that meet their entertainment needs and budget."

Kentucky releases new highway map

The Associated Press

FRANKFORT – Kentucky has released its new highway map for 2013.

The official map is now available statewide at rest areas, welcome centers, local convention and tourism offices and all state parks.

The map is published each year by the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet. The 2013 map reflects a number of highway improvements, such as along Kentucky 313 in Hardin and Meade counties, a widened, four-lane U.S. 27 in Garrard County and the new Kentucky 873 in Clay County, which now accesses the Hal Rogers Parkway from U.S. 421.

The map cover features horses and riders cantering along a lake shore of Land Between the Lakes National Recreation Area in western Kentucky. The map's "Only One Kentucky" theme highlights the scenery, natural attractions and features unique to the bluegrass state.

Priest Street opening delayed

■ Road likely closed until early next week

Gleaner staff

Repairs on the collapsed portion of Priest Street near the Second Street overpass have run into new problems and now the road is expected to stay closed through the weekend and perhaps longer, according to Tom Williams, director of engineering for the Henderson Water Utility. It has been closed since the middle of last week, after a contractor pushing a major new sewer line under the road ran into a void under the concrete, where water had collected over a long period of time. That problem was repaired, and the road had been expected to re-open on Friday, but now that has been delayed.

"After the rainfall Tuesday night, we discovered another void under the pavement on Priest Street," Williams said. "We are excavating to find the extent of that problem, and will likely have to keep the road closed through the weekend, and into early next week."

Williams said the original problems were "larger than we first believed, but they have now been filled with flowable concrete fill, and the pavement has been removed and replaced."

He said once the void is filled additional work on shoulders and guardrail will remain, but that will be performed while the road stays open.

MIKE LAWRENCE / THE GLEANER

Workers use an excavator to remove recently poured concrete after a contractor pushing a major new sewer line under Priest Street discovered a water filled void.

Coach enters plea in sex abuse charge

FALMOUTH, Ky. — A 21-year-old part-time volleyball coach with a northern Kentucky school district has pleaded not guilty to a charge of sex abuse.

The Kentucky Enquirer (<http://bit.ly/VvCko4>) reports that 21-year-old Cassandra Rose Elfers entered the plea Tuesday in Pendleton County District Court. The charges stem from accusations of an inappropriate relationship with a 13-year-old student.

Elfers' lawyer, Eric Deters, said his client did not have a sexual relationship with the child, nor did she send any text messages or photos to the teen's phone.

Elfers is a coach with the Pendleton County School District.

Plant gets Corvette engine production

BOWLINGGREEN — The Kentucky plant that builds Corvettes will start producing high-performance engines for the iconic sports car.

General Motors officials announced Wednesday that the engine work will add 20 jobs at the Corvette plant.

The automaker will invest $3.5 million to shift the production from Michigan to Bowling Green. It's on top of a $131 million investment announced in 2011 to retrofit the plant for production of the next generation Corvette.

The new investment will allow Corvette buyers to have a hand in building their own engines at the Bowling Green plant, under the supervision of GM technicians.

Standard engines for Corvettes are made at a plant in New York state.

Kentucky reducing child-care assistance

FRANKFORT — Thousands of low-income families in Kentucky will stop receiving state assistance with child care costs later this year.

The Kentucky Department of Community Based Services made the announcement Thursday. According to media reports, the agency also said it would no longer take new applicants to the program or pay subsidies to families caring for abused or neglected children beginning in April.

The agency cited a budget shortfall for the decisions.

The new rules limiting who is eligible for the child care assistance program go into effect in July. Income requirements now set at $33,075 for a family of four will be reduced to $22,050 for a family of four.

School district mulls new tech policy

MIDDLESBORO — A southeastern Kentucky school district is considering a request to allow high school students to bring their own technology, such as smartphones or tablets, into the classroom to work on assignments.

The Middlesboro Daily News reports Pineville teacher Matthew Shafer presented the idea Monday at the Pineville Independent Board of Education meeting, saying he has tested the idea.

"It has worked really well in my classroom," said Shafer. "I've never had my kids more engaged in research than when they've had it on their phone."

Man enters plea in infant son's death

RADCLIFF — A central Kentucky man has pleaded not guilty to upgraded charges in the death of his infant son.

The News-Enterprise reported 23-year-old Jarrod D. Davis of Radcliff entered the plea Tuesday to charges of murder and abuse. Originally, he had faced a charge of second-degree manslaughter.

Davis told police he found his son, Ja'Vion, dead in his crib, but later said he had dropped him causing the child to hit his head. A medical examiner found blunt force trauma to the baby's head and several other injuries.

County escapes major storm damage

Gleaner staff

Henderson County once again escaped major damage, serious injuries and substantial flooding despite a storm system blowing through the area Tuesday night.

Emergency Management Director Larry Koerber said currently no one has reported any issues, including power outages from the storm system.

Meteorologists with the National Weather Service in Paducah said they currently don't have any reports of damage or storm-related issues from Henderson County.

However, roughly 1.26 inches of rain fell in parts of the Henderson/Evansville region Tuesday night into early Wednesday morning.

The forecast for Wednesday includes a chance of more showers with blustery conditions.

Wind speeds Wednesday night are expected to be between 19 and 24 miles per hour.

There is a slight chance of rain and snow on Thursday. Temperatures are expected to drop to below freezing on Friday. However, it looks like it will be sunny and clear on Friday.

Coal company sues worker who had safety worries

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — The federal agency that oversees mine safety claims a western Kentucky coal company broke the law by filing a lawsuit against a former worker who complained about unsafe working conditions.

Using a federal law designed to protect workers, welder Reuben Shemwell lodged a complaint last year against Armstrong Coal after he was fired in 2011 from his job at the company's Parkway Mine.

The U.S. Mine Safety and Health Agency, an arm of the Department of Labor, investigated but ultimately decided not to pursue Shemwell's complaint. The agency got involved again this month when Armstrong Coal sued Shemwell.

MSHA said Armstrong's suit, filed in August, violated the section of the law designed to protect miners who file discrimination complaints.

"I've been doing these cases for over 30 years ... and I have never heard or experienced a coal company suing a miner because MSHA turned down their case on the merits," said Shemwell's attorney, Tony Oppegard.

Armstrong Coal has maintained that Shemwell was fired for using his cellphone too much on the worksite, and not for complaining about work conditions.

Do You Have PSORIASIS?

Plaque psoriasis is a long-term disease of the immune system that causes red scaly patches, often with a silvery scale, to appear on the skin. Approximately 1.5 million American adults suffer from moderate to severe plaque psoriasis. These plaques may itch, be painful, and can bleed. They can appear anywhere on the body but are most commonly found on the elbows, knees, scalp and lower back. People with plaque psoriasis may notice that there are times when their skin worsens, then gets better.

The Deaconess Clinic Department of Dermatology is participating in a national clinical research study of an investigational drug for psoriasis. If you suffer from moderate to severe psoriasis, you may qualify to receive no-cost skin assessments by a board-certified dermatologist, study medication and compensation for time and travel. You must be at least 18 years old to participate.

You are not required to have health insurance to participate.

To find out if you qualify, or for more information, call the Research InfoLine at 812-474-7184 or toll free at 1-877-654-0311.

Petty politics have no place in disaster bill

Three months after Superstorm Sandy devastated the coastal areas of New Jersey and New York, Congress finally passed a $50.5 billion bill to rebuild homes, businesses, utilities, mass transit and other critical infrastructure. Meanwhile, thousands of those dispossessed by the storm shivered in temporary housing and shelters during the Northeastern winter. This delay does no credit to the Congress — and especially to the hard-line Republicans who hoped to use the bill, and its obvious need, to wring more of their precious budget cuts from their more charitable colleagues. This is not only bad policy but potentially a bad precedent.

Disaster relief is passed under the rules governing emergency appropriations, money that is fast-tracked in the case of hurricanes, floods, droughts and the like. Because these are must-pass funds, members of Congress like to attach pet projects to the measures. The Sandy relief bill was no different.

Congressional Republicans rightly objected, since emergency appropriations go right to the deficit. So, stripped from the bill were $1 billion to bolster embassy security and $188 million for Amtrak tunnels under the Hudson. These surely are worthwhile expenditures, but they should be considered under the regular appropriations process.

But that wasn't enough for the more rambunctious members of the GOP caucus.

One again, they pulled the rug out from under House Speaker John Boehner, and 179 of them voted against the relief bill, leaving the GOP leaders to rely on Democratic votes for passage.

Their objection: The relief money wasn't “paid for” by cuts elsewhere in federal spending. In the Senate, Republican Mike Lee of Utah attempted to pay for relief through a federal spending cut of one-half of 1 percent over the next nine years. The measure was rejected 35-62.

The Wall Street Journal said the budget cuts would have been “a break from more than two decades of precedent, which saw more than three dozen disaster-aid bills passed without offsets.”

The vote shouldn't have been even that close. We Americans pride ourselves on taking care of disaster victims first and worrying about how to pay for that generosity later. We don't tell the victims to sit and shiver in their Federal Emergency Management Agency tents while Congress balances the budget in 10, maybe 20, years.

Finally, there was an unpleasant whiff of regionalism in the vote.

Most of the Republicans were from the South and West — and notably weren't talking about budget offsets and spending cuts when it came time to pay for Hurricanes Katrina or Rita.

There is a saying in Washington: “What goes around, comes around.” One hopes that the Northeastern and mid-Atlantic members of Congress don't take their own sweet time in paying for the next Gulf Coast hurricane.

Obama trailing Nixon down slippery slope

JAY AMBROSE

representatives of the people determine laws that will govern not just us but the government leaders themselves.

Schlesinger's concern was the imbalance of presidential power that had kept growing and growing until it got entirely out of hand in the Nixon years. His was an administration that followed others in promulgating war acts Congress had not approved, that avoided enforcing laws through varied devices and grossly overstepped still other bounds, ultimately even plotting a burglary. It was as if the only curb on a president was an election every four years, Schlesinger said.

Our democracy did finally catch up with Nixon. I can in fact remember people happily saying after he resigned that “the system works.” But does it? In Obama, we have a president who, among multiple other constitutional bombardments, forgot Congress in his revisions of at least three American laws and made appointments to the National Labor Relations Board and a newly established Consumer Financial Protection Bureau without Senate approval. A president can so act under law if the Senate is in recess. The Senate — by a determination only it can make — was not in recess at the time.

There's a dismaying incongruity here. These two agencies have extraordinary authority, are answerable to hardly anyone or anything, and issue massive gobs of rulings on matters large and small, itself a mighty march from the sensitivities that inspired a revolution. Meanwhile, the man making the appointments is mainly regulated by a Constitution with relatively few rules and can't get them straight, even though he could potentially visit far more catastrophe on us than those citizens the agencies are aiming to control.

The D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled that Obama acted as if he can appoint people to such positions whenever and however he pleases, and flatly says: “This cannot be law.” Hurrah, but don't suppose this ruling is the final word or that Obama won't yet sneak past the law on this and far more, a thought that brings us back to the Schlesinger book.

The last chapter, written three decades ago, frets about future presidents — meaning presidents of more recent times — and what it will take to keep them reasonably in tow. The answer, Schlesinger believes, is a public spirit that shakes hands with the spirit of the Constitution. He then quotes the 19th-century poet Walt Whitman, who said tyranny can enter this country any time it chooses and that there is just one “bar against it,” namely a “resolute breed” of us Americans. We are either vigilant, demanding rule of law, or we aren't, in which case we won't get it.

Benghazi probe must shift to improving safety

DAN THOMASSON
COLUMNIST

Sen. Ron Johnson found out the hard way that the official misstatements about who was responsible immediately following the attack were no longer a viable line of questioning. Clinton made no bones about her disdain for his questioning, dismissing it as politically motivated without actually saying so.

The important, relevant questions are: How did U.S. intelligence fail to anticipate such a shoot-out at a base containing a CIA safe house, despite warnings? Why wasn't the request for additional security — made before the attack — fulfilled? How do we prevent such an attack from happening again?

The request apparently wasn't brought to Clinton's attention. And although Congress did not fully fund the department's request to safeguard the nation's diplomatic missions, money could have been transferred from other endeavors.

The crux of this problem lies in a diplomatic culture that firmly believes too much protection inhibits the ability to do the job, that a fortress mentality at our far-flung embassies is bad for our foreign policy. In areas such as the Middle East, there is danger everywhere. Most diplomats posted to front-line assignments understand this.

Recent history has taught us that some events are unavoidable. The Iran hostage crisis and the bombings of U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania are good examples.

But that doesn't mean we should tolerate scrimping on security to the point of irresponsibility or ignoring obvious appeals and warnings. That happened in Benghazi, and that is where Clinton and her staff are vulnerable.

To Clinton's credit, she understands this and accepts responsibility. It's problematic whether Congress does.

Clinton failed to outline what's needed. This may have been in deference to her successor, Sen. John Kerry. One thing seems clear. She controls a situation like this about as well as anyone might. If she has a weakness, it is an almost imperious attitude at times brought on by her confidence in her own intellectual ability.

Kerry will have to deal with what comes next in preventing more Benghazi incidents in a volatile region where local authorities often can't be trusted to protect foreign diplomats, particularly those representing the U.S. Expanded Marine detachments are an obvious step, but rethinking private contract security also should be a top priority in the aftermath of these failures. Beefing up the Bureau of Diplomatic Security is another option.

Probably the best way to lessen the threat is to listen to those on-site and respond with common sense and prudent action.

Phoenix shooting sparks manhunt

By Jacques Billeaud
Associated Press

PHOENIX — A gunman opened fire at a Phoenix office complex Wednesday, killing one person, wounding two others and setting off a manhunt.

Authorities identified the suspect as Arthur D. Harmon, who they said opened fire at the end of a mediation session. They identified a man who died hours after the Wednesday morning shooting as 48-year-old Steve Singer.

Police say a 43-year-old man was listed in critical condition and a 32-year-old woman suffered injuries that weren't life threatening.

“We believe the two men were the targets. It was not a random shooting,” said Sgt. Tommy Thompson, a Phoenix police spokesman.

Police didn't immediately release the names of the wounded. But a Phoenix law firm, Osborn Maledon, said one of its lawyers, Mark Hummels, was among the wounded. The firm said he “was representing a client in a mediation” when he was shot.

According to court documents, Harmon was scheduled to go to a law office in the same building where the shooting took place for a settlement conference in lawsuit he filed last April against Scottsdale-based Fusion Contact Centers LLC.

The company had hired him to refurbish office cubicles at two call centers in California, but a contract dispute arose.

Heavily armed law enforcers move away from the suspect's home at a hostage scene Wednesday in Midland City, Ala. Authorities were locked in a standoff with a gunman who allegedly intercepted a school bus, killed the driver, and snatched a 6-year-old boy.

Gunman kills bus driver, abducts boy, police say

■ Suspect in bunker with hostage, age 6

By Phillip Rawls
Associated Press

MIDLAND CITY, Ala. — A gunman holed up in a bunker with a 6-year-old hostage kept law officers at bay Wednesday in an all-night, all-day standoff that began when he killed a school bus driver and dragged the boy away, authorities said.

SWAT teams took up positions around the gunman's rural property and police negotiators tried to win the kindergartner's safe release.

The gunman, identified by neighbors as Jimmy Lee Dykes, a 65-year-old retired truck driver, was known around the neighborhood as a menacing figure who once beat a dog to death with a lead pipe, threatened to shoot children for setting foot on his property and patrolled his yard at night with a flashlight and a shotgun.

He had been scheduled to appear in court Wednesday morning to answer charges he shot at his neighbors in a dispute last month over a speed bump.

The standoff along a red dirt road began Tuesday afternoon after a gunman boarded a stopped school bus filled with children in the town of Midland City, population 2,300. Sheriff Wally Olson said the man shot the bus driver when he refused to hand over a 6-year-old child. The gunman then took the boy.

“As far as we know there is no relation at all. He just wanted a child for a hostage situation,” said Michael Senn, a pastor who helped comfort the traumatized children after the attack.

The bus driver, Charles Albert Poland Jr., 66, was hailed by locals as a hero who gave his life to protect 21 students.

The boy's classmates, their parents and other members of this small Bible Belt community gathered in several churches and held a candlelight vigil in the town square Wednesday evening to pray for Poland and for the boy's safety. Some in the square joined together to sing “Amazing Grace.”

Authorities gave no details on the standoff, and it was unclear if Dykes made any demands from his underground bunker, which resembled a tornado shelter.

The sheriff said in a brief statement Wednesday evening that negotiators continued talking to the suspect and “at this time we have no reason to believe that the child has been harmed.”

PENNSYLVANIA

Priest, teacher convicted in abuse

PHILADELPHIA — A jury Wednesday convicted a priest and teacher in a pivotal church-abuse case that rocked the Philadelphia archdiocese and sent a church official to prison for child endangerment.

The verdict supports accounts by a 24-year-old policeman's son that he was sexually abused by the Rev. Charles Engelhardt and sixth-grade teacher Bernard Shero in about 1999.

The accuser's 2009 complaint describing abuse by two priests and the teacher led to Monsignor William Lynn's landmark conviction last year for endangerment. Lynn is serving three to six years in prison for his role transferring an admitted pedophile priest to the accuser's parish.

The jury convicted Shero of rape, indecent sexual assault and other charges, and Engelhardt of indecent assault of a child under 13, corruption of a minor and conspiracy with Avery.

Defense lawyers argued that details of his story defied belief, and said the troubled young man was simply looking for a payout from his pending civil suit against the archdiocese.

Judge: Sandusky won't get new trial

HARRISBURG — Jerry Sandusky lost a bid for a new trial Wednesday when a judge rejected his argument that his lawyers were not given enough time to prepare for the three-week proceeding that ended with a 45-count guilty verdict.

Judge John Cleland's 27-page order said lawyers for the former Penn State assistant football coach conceded that their post-trial review turned up no material that would have changed their trial strategy.

He also rejected post-sentencing motions regarding jury instructions, hearsay testimony and a comment by the prosecution during closing arguments that referred to the fact that Sandusky, who did not testify at trial, gave media interviews after he was arrested in November 2011.

Sandusky is serving a 30- to 60-year state prison sentence for sexual abuse of 10 boys.

Also Wednesday, the Pennsylvania Senate unanimously approved a bill that aims to keep Penn State's $60 million fine to the NCAA over the Sandusky scandal within the state. The measure would require such fines of at least $10 million to be deposited into a state-administered account to be spent on Pennsylvania programs that address childhood sexual abuse.

Governor's ex-aide to fill in on Senate

BOSTON — Although his time in the U.S. Senate will be brief — less than five full months — William “Mo” Cowan could find himself in the thick of major policy debates from the federal budget to immigration reform and gun control.

Democratic Gov. Deval Patrick on Wednesday appointed Cowan, his former chief of staff, as the interim U.S. senator for Massachusetts until a special election is held June 25 to fill the seat left vacant by John Kerry's confirmation as the nation's next secretary of state.

Cowan, 43, will be the state's second African-American senator. Edward Brooke, a Republican, served two terms from 1967-1979.

VIETNAM

American activist free after 9 months

HANOI — Vietnamese authorities Wednesday released and deported an American pro-democracy activist detained since April, a move that contrasts with the long prison terms given to Vietnamese activists who are members of the same U.S.-based dissident group.

The release of Nguyen Quoc Quan came after U.S. diplomatic pressure and removes a thorn in relations between the former enemies. Both countries are trying to strengthen their ties in large part because of shared concerns over China's emerging military and economic might.

Vietnam's Foreign Ministry said in a statement that Quan had “confessed to his crime” and asked for leniency to be reunited with his family. His wife, Huong Mai Ngo, said she doubted this was the case, suggesting that Hanoi was seeking a face-saving way of allowing him to go home.

Quan, a 59-year-old American citizen, was arrested at Ho Chi Minh City's airport in April after arriving on a flight from the United States, where he has lived since fleeing Vietnam by boat as a young man.

He is a leading member of Viet Tan, a nonviolent pro-democracy group that Vietnamese authorities have labeled a terrorist organization.

MALI

French capture Islamist stronghold

SEVARE — French forces met no resistance Wednesday in Kidal, the Islamists' last major town, as the two-week-old mission scored another success in its effort to dislodge the al-Qaida-linked militants from northern Mali.

The capture of Kidal came just days after French and Malian forces retook two other provincial capitals — Gao and Timbuktu — that also had been under harsh Islamic rule for nearly 10 months.

Many fear the Islamists now will attempt to hide among civilian populations in small outlying villages, only to return and attack the weaker African forces once the French are gone.

The Islamists are believed to have an elaborate system of caves and other desert hideouts that they have constructed over the last year as momentum for a West African regional military intervention stalled.

PAKISTAN

Bomb kills three suspected militants

KARACHI — A bomb blast killed three suspected militants in Pakistan's largest city Wednesday as they were carrying out preparations for a deadly attack, police said.

The suspected militants were attempting to put the bomb in the trunk of a taxi when it went off, said senior police officer Aleem Jafri. The device exploded accidentally.

The men had prepared three other bombs, but they did not explode and were defused by police.

The bombs, which were wired with electronic detonators, contained about 660 pounds of explosives, Jafri said.

Karachi has a long history of violence carried out by Islamic militants and gangs associated with the city's main political parties.

Brazil blamed for fatal fire

■ Nightclub owner upset, lawyer says

By Juliana Barbassa
Associated Press

SANTA MARIA, Brazil — The owner of a nightclub in southern Brazil where more than 230 people died in a fire last weekend deflected blame to “the whole country,” as well as to architects and inspectors charged with making sure the building was safe, his lawyer said Wednesday.

Attorney Jader Marques said his client, Elissandro Spohr, “regretted having ever been born” because of his grief over the fire but still blamed Sunday's tragedy on “a succession of errors made by the whole country.”

Police investigating the blaze have said it likely started when a country music band performing at the Kiss nightclub in the college town of Santa Maria lit a flare, which ignited flammable soundproofing foam on the ceiling. That initial error was compounded by the near-total lack of emergency infrastructure such as a fire alarms or sprinkler systems, police have said. The club also had only one working door and a faulty fire extinguisher.

Marques insisted that “my client's responsibility is having trusted too much in the inspectors and in those responsible for the construction.”

“Hindsight is 20-20,” he said, stressing that public officials had signed off on the club.

The number of injured jumped to 143 Wednesday after 22 people were admitted to hospitals with respiratory problems after having escaped the club apparently unharmed. Brazil Health Minister Alexandre Padilha has urged the fire's survivors to remain alert for any symptoms of so-called “chemical pneumonia,” which can take up to three days to develop following exposure to toxic fumes and smoke.

The blaze also claimed another life late Tuesday, raising the death toll to 235, as a 21-year-old man with burns covering 70 percent of his body succumbed to his wounds. The man's older brother was also killed in the fire and buried Sunday. Earlier this week, police detained Spohr, the club's other co-owner and two musicians who were playing in the club when the fire broke out, and are holding them for five days as part of the investigation. Spohr is recovering from a respiratory infection and is said to be suffering from depression in police custody at a hospital in a nearby town.

Marques denied reports that overcrowding helped cause Sunday's tragedy, insisting there were only 600 to 700 people in the club at any one time. Capacity for the 6,650-square-foot night-spot stood at less than 700, though the band's guitarist told media that the space was packed with an estimated 1,200 to 1,300 people. Police have given the same estimate.

Authorities have said that of the 143 people still hospitalized, more than 70 are still in critical states.

Israel hits military target in Syria

By Ben Hubbard
Associated Press

BEIRUT — Israel conducted a rare airstrike on a military target inside Syria near the border with Lebanon, foreign officials and Syrian state TV said Wednesday, amid fears President Bashar Assad's regime could provide powerful weapons to the Islamic militant group Hezbollah.

Regional security officials said Israel had been planning in the days leading up to the airstrike to hit a shipment of weapons bound for Hezbollah, Lebanon's most powerful military force and a sworn enemy of the Jewish state. Among Israeli officials' chief fears is that Assad will pass chemical weapons or sophisticated anti-aircraft missiles to Hezbollah — something that could change the balance of power in the region and greatly hinder Israel's ability to conduct air sorties in Lebanon.

The regional officials said the shipment Israel was planning to strike included Russian-made SA-17 anti-aircraft missiles, which would be strategically “game-changing” in the hands of Hezbollah by enabling the group to carry out fiercer attacks on Israel and shoot down Israeli jets, helicopters and surveillance drones. A U.S. official said the strike hit a convoy of trucks but did not give an exact location.

The Syrian military said the jets bombed a military research center in the area of Jamraya, northwest of the capital, Damascus, and about 10 miles from the border with Lebanon.

BlackBerry finally unveils new smartphone

The Associated Press

NEW YORK – A new generation of more versatile BlackBerry smartphones is finally about to hit the market after excruciating delays allowed mobile devices made by Apple, Samsung and others to build commanding leads in a market that is redefining society.

BlackBerry maker Research in Motion Ltd. formally unveiled its long-awaited line-up of revamped smartphones and software Wednesday at simultaneous events held in New York, Toronto, London, Paris, Dubai, Johannesburg, Jakarta and Delhi.

In a move underscoring the stakes riding on its make-or-break product line-up, the Canadian company used the occasion to announce it is changing its name to BlackBerry — a pioneering brand that has lost its cachet since Apple's 2007 release of the iPhone reset expectations for what a smartphone should do.

The first devices in the new crop of BlackBerrys will be called the Q10, which will feature a physical keyboard like previous versions of the phone, and the Z10 will have only touch-screen keyboard, like Apple's trend-setting iPhone and other handsets running on Google's Android software, including Samsung's popular Galaxy. They will run on a redesigned operating system called BlackBerry 10, which the company began working on after buying QNX Software Systems in 2010.

LEARNING from 1A

"If we want them to have democratic values, we have to teach them democratic values."

Under the Reggio Emilia Approach, children are taught citizenship. The young kids learn how to work together in groups, how to take responsibility for their decisions and how their choices affect others.

Audubon Area Head Start in Owensboro has used the approach for 12 years. Morganfield Elementary in Union County also adheres to it, as does Henderson Community College's Head Start program.

The college's Family Development Center has 17 children between the ages 3 and 5 in its Head Start, said Bridget Murray, an associate professor of early childhood development at HCC. There is also an early Head Start that serves eight children from six weeks until age 3.

Children are empowered with the Reggio Emilia Approach and drive learning in the direction they want to go, Murray said.

People attending the seminar Saturday afternoon will visit the classrooms at HCC and Morganfield Elementary, Green said. Saturday morning and the session Friday will be a series of lectures about the Reggio Emilia Approach.

Renowned Reggio Emilia Approach educators Amelia Gambetti and Lella Gandini are the featured speakers at the seminar. Gandini is also teaching two courses offered at HCC.

"It's an amazing opportunity to have someone the caliber of Dr. Lella Gandini," said Murray. "She is the expert. She's taught all over the world."

The first class, which spans three weekends beginning this week, has 30 students enrolled from HCC, University of Southern Indiana and Murray State University. There will be a four-day course in June.

On-site registration for the two-day seminar will be accepted, Green said. Registration is $65.

ECONOMY from 1A

on growth," said James Marple, senior economist at TD Bank.

Deep spending cuts in defense and domestic programs are set to kick in March 1. Most of the federal government could shut down March 27 if Congress doesn't extend a temporary measure authorizing funding. And the nation's borrowing limit must be raised by May 18 or the government could default on its debts.

A sputtering economy could weaken President Barack Obama's hand in dealing with Congress and complicate his efforts to push forward on other domestic priorities, such as immigration reform and gun control.

The Commerce Department said the economy shrank last quarter mainly because companies restocked at a slower rate and the government slashed defense spending. Exports also fell. Economists say some of those factors could prove temporary. Still, the slowdown from the 3.1 percent annual growth rate in the July-September quarter was unexpectedly sharp.

For all of 2012, the economy expanded 2.2 percent, better than 2011's growth of 1.8 percent.

The Federal Reserve referred to the fourth-quarter slowdown Wednesday in a statement after a policy meeting. The U.S. economy appears to have "paused in recent months," the Fed said, mainly because of temporary factors. The central bank said growth would likely resume this year. But it reaffirmed its commitment to stimulating the economy by keeping borrowing costs low for the foreseeable future.

Looming government cutbacks may already have hindered the economy: Concern over the year-end fiscal cliff could be one reason businesses slowed their restocking. And defense spending may have fallen as agencies prepared for automatic spending cuts. Congress managed to avert the fiscal cliff but only postponed the start of automatic spending cuts until March 1.

The drag from the government comes as private-sector growth is picking up. Consumers and businesses spent more in the October-December quarter compared with the July-September quarter.

Consumer spending, which drives about 70 percent of the economy, added 1.5 percentage points to growth last quarter. Business investment and home construction contributed, too.

But government spending cuts and slower company restocking, which can fluctuate sharply, subtracted a combined 2.6 percentage points from GDP. And a drop in exports subtracted an additional quarter-point.

Defense spending plummeted more than 22 percent, the steepest drop in more than 40 years. Nearly all those cuts were in services, such as weapons maintenance and personnel support.

to have significant upgrades over the next five or six years," Austin said. "It probably needs to be tied into the GIS system and needs some new software. We are not up to where we would like to be. And we won't be in five years if we don't do something."

"The longer we wait, the worse shape we're going to be in and the more costly it's going to be for us," Austin said. "It's something we need to pay attention to and have a plan for."

City Finance Director Robert Gunter estimates it will cost $936,651 to run the 911 Center this year. Landline fees are expected to bring in $418,000, while cellphone fees are expected to be $183,300, for a total of $601,300.

That leaves about $335,000 the city and county governments need to come up with to subsidize the system; they contribute amounts pro-rated by the number of households within their respective limits.

By placing the 911 fee on water bills, thereby making cellphone users pay the same amount as landline customers, it would increase revenues to $771,300, "which is $170,000 more than we're collecting now," Austin said. "Everybody in the community would be paying the same fair amount for 911 service. The county's deficit would drop to $41,000 and the city's deficit would drop to $124,000."

Magistrate Bruce Todd noted that legislation is currently pending before the General Assembly to deal with the problem, which is hitting 911 centers across the state.

The committee appeared receptive to Austin's message. "Everybody loves the service when you're dying and calling 911 and you want somebody to answer," said city Commissioner Robby Mills. "It's just not fair; everybody needs to pay across the board."

GUN CONTROL from 1A

listen carefully, and no more.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said Tuesday that reviewing the issue was timely.

"But I'm a strong supporter of the Second Amendment," he said citing the constitutional provision that guarantees the right to bear arms, and I don't intend to change."

Giffords' appearance — not only her words, but her obvious difficulty in speaking — served to underscore the emotion surrounding the issue of gun curbs. "Speech is a distant memory" for his wife, Kelly said in remarks of his own after his wife had completed her brief plea for action.

The gunman in Tucson, Jared Loughner, used a 9 mm Glock pistol with an extended ammunition magazine in the attack that wounded the former congresswoman and killed six. The handgun would not have been illegal under a federal assault weapons ban that lapsed more than seven years ago, but the magazine that held more than 30 bullets would have been prohibited.

The chairman of the panel, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said it is "a simple matter of common sense" that there should be a strengthening of background checks and that doing so would not threaten gun owners' rights. The checks are currently required for gun purchases from licensed dealers but not at gun shows or other private transaction.

At the same time, he said the Constitution's second amendment "is secure and will remain secure and protection....No one can or will take those rights or our guns away," he said.

He added, "let us forego sloganeering, demagoguery and partisan recriminations. This is too important for that."

Sen. Charles Grassley of Iowa, the panel's senior Republican, said that while the shootings in Arizona and Connecticut were terrible tragedies, they "should not be used to put forward every gun control measure that has been floating around for years."

He also said any serious discussion of the issue "must include a complete re-examination of mental health as it related to mass shootings."

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., indicated that whatever the committee produced wouldn't necessarily be the final product, saying the package would be debated by the full Senate and senators would be allowed to propose "whatever amendments they want that deal with this issue."

Despite the horrific Newtown slayings, it remains unclear whether those advocating limits on gun availability will be able to overcome resistance by the NRA and lawmakers from states where gun ownership abounds. Question marks include not just many Republicans but also Democratic senators facing reelection in red-leaning states in 2014. They include Max Baucus of Montana, Mark Begich of Alaska and Mark Pryor of Arkansas.

Knowing that television cameras would beam images of the hearing nationally, both sides were drumming up supporters to attend Wednesday's session.

A page on an NRA-related website urged backers to arrive two hours early to get seats, bring no signs and dress appropriately. The liberal BoldProgressives.org urged its members to attend, saying the NRA "will try to pack the room with their supporters to deceive Congress into believing they are mainstream."

Earlier this month, President Barack Obama proposed a package that includes banning assault weapons, requiring background checks on all firearms purchases and limiting ammunition magazines to 10 rounds.

Giffords underwent a lengthy rehabilitation process and has regained some ability to speak, but has retired from Congress. A gun owner, she and her husband Mark Kelly, a retired astronaut, have formed a political action committee called Americans for Responsible Solutions to back lawmakers who support tighter gun restrictions.

In testimony prepared for the hearing but released Tuesday, Wayne LaPierre, NRA executive vice president, said such steps had failed in the past. He instead voiced support for better enforcement of existing laws, beefing up school security and strengthening the government's ability to keep guns from mentally unstable people.

The massacre in Newtown has also set off a national discussion about mental health care, with everyone from law enforcement leaders to the gun industry urging policymakers to focus on the issue as a way to help prevent similar mass shootings. The issue of mental health has arisen in four recent mass shootings, including Sandy Hook, the Tucson shooting, the incident in an Aurora, Colo., movie theater last year and Virginia Tech in 2007.

"Law-abiding gun owners will not accept blame for the acts of violent or deranged criminals," LaPierre said in his statement. "Nor do we believe the government should dictate what we can lawfully own and use to protect our families."

While not yielding on specifics, much of LaPierre's statement had a milder tone than other remarks the NRA has made since Newtown.

That includes an NRA television ad calling Obama an "elitist hypocrite" for voicing doubts about having armed school guards while his own children are protected that way at their school. While Obama's children have Secret Service protection, officials at their school have said its own guards don't carry guns.

Feinstein said Tuesday that she will hold her own hearing on gun control because she was unhappy that three of the five witnesses testifying Wednesday are "skewed against us."

Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., said Tuesday he would wait to see what legislation Democrats produce. Republican leaders of the GOP-run House have expressed similar sentiments.

Lewis says he's 'agitated,' not angry

■ Report linking him to company is now a part of Super Bowl week

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Smiling, even laughing, at questions about a report linking him to a company that purports to make performance-enhancers, Baltimore Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis said Wednesday he "never, ever took" the stuff.

Lewis described himself as "agitated," not angry, that the story has become part of the Super Bowl-week prelude to Baltimore's game against the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday.

He added that he's certain his teammates won't be distracted by the report in Sports Illustrated. The magazine said Lewis sought help from a company that says its deer-antler spray and pills contain a banned product connected to human growth hormone. The 37-year-old Lewis is the leading tackler in the NFL postseason after returning from a torn right triceps that sidelined him for 10 games.

In a private conversation with Ravens head coach John Harbaugh, and later in the public setting of a news conference, Lewis distanced himself from Sports With Alternatives To Steroids (SWATS). SI reported that company owner Mitch Ross recorded a call with Lewis hours after the player hurt his arm in an October game against Dallas. According to the report, Lewis asked Ross to send him deer-antler spray and pills, along with other items made by the company.

"It's so funny of a story because I never, ever took what he says or whatever I was supposed to do. And it's just sad once again that someone can have this much attention on a stage this big, where the dreams are really real," Lewis said Wednesday, wearing his white No. 52 Ravens jersey, gray sweat pants and a black hat with the team's purple logo. "I don't need it. My teammates don't need it. The 49ers don't need it. Nobody needs it."

The magazine reported that when it spoke to Lewis for its story, he acknowledged asking Ross for "some more of the regular stuff" on the night of the injury and that he has been associated with the company "for a couple years."

Lewis' stance Wednesday was different.

"He told me there's nothing to it. ... He's told us in the past, he's told us now, that he's never taken any of that stuff, ever. And I believe Ray. I trust Ray completely. We have a relationship. I know this man. And I know what he's all about," Harbaugh said. "It's just too bad it has to be something that gets so much play."

Christopher Key, a co-owner of SWATS, said in a telephone interview that the company removed from its website NFL players' endorsements because "all the players were given letters by the NFL two years ago saying they had to cease and desist and could not continue to do business with us anymore."

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello confirmed that, but did not respond to other requests for comment about the company or Lewis' involvement.

Key said the deer-antler products made by SWATS "helped the body repair, regrow and rejuvenate" and that "you will never fail a drug test from taking our product."

He added that SWATS has sold its products to more than 20 college football players each at Southeastern Conference schools Alabama, Auburn, Mississippi, LSU and Georgia.

Alabama has sent two cease and desist letters to the company, university spokeswoman Debbie Lane said, adding: "UA has been aware of this situation for some time, and we have monitored this company for several years."

Auburn spokesman Kirk Sampson said that school sent a cease-and-desist letter in 2011.

In an emailed statement, Ross said: "It is the view of SWATS and Mitch Ross that the timing of information was unfortunate and misleading and was in no way intended to harm any athlete. We have always been about aiding athletes to heal faster and participate at an optimum level of play in a lawful and healthy manner. We never encourage the use of harmful supplements and/or dangerous drugs."

Harbaugh didn't think his players would be bothered a bit by the subject this week, dismissively waving his left hand while saying: "As a football team, it's not even a factor for us."

Known for his frequent references to God and faith, 2001 Super Bowl MVP Lewis called the whole episode a "joke" and a "trick of the devil," adding that he told teammates: "Don't let people from the outside ever come and try to disturb what's inside."

Hoosiers roll past rival Purdue

■ Zeller and Watford lead No. 3 Indiana to 97-60 romp

By Michael Marot
Associated Press

Cody Zeller scored 13 of his 19 points in the first half, Christian Watford added 17 points and No. 3 Indiana routed rival Purdue 97-60 on Wednesday night to hand the Boilermakers their worst loss at Mackey Arena.

The Hoosiers (19-2, 7-1 Big Ten) have won four straight overall and five consecutive road games in league play dating to last season. They remained tied for the Big Ten lead with No. 1 Michigan.

The Wolverines also won Wednesday night, beating Northwestern 68-46, to set up a Saturday night showdown between the league leaders in Bloomington, one of the most highly anticipated games of the season.

Purdue (11-10, 4-4) was led by freshman center A.J. Hammons, who had a career-high 30 points, but couldn't avoid a second straight home loss to the Hoosiers. The Boilermakers have lost only twice in their last six games.

Indiana took control early with a 9-0 run, then closed the first half on a 13-2 spurt to take a 47-27 halftime lead.

The Boilermakers couldn't get closer than 18 in the second half.

Indiana has won three straight over the Boilermakers and finished with its highest point total in the series since a 106-point game on Jan. 28, 1992. Indiana also had a season-high 12 3-pointers and fell just short of matching the school record for margin of victory (41 points) in the 199-game series.

Ronnie Johnson added 13 points for Purdue.

This was not the same team Boilermakers fans had watched win four of its previous five games or three straight at home.

The Boilermakers were outrebounded 39-29, committed 18 turnovers compared with eight for the Hoosiers and spent most of the night trying to overcome foul trouble.

That combination,

Zeller's offensive re-emergence and Indiana's selfless play were just too much for Purdue.

Zeller was coming off a two-game stretch in which he made just two baskets and had 11 total points. He surpassed those numbers in 16 minutes Wednesday night, finishing the first half with 13 points, nine rebounds, two assists while going 7 of 7 from the free throw line.

It made a huge difference.

After letting Purdue hang around for 9 minutes, the Hoosiers went right at the foul-prone Boilermakers.

Four different Indiana players scored during a 9-0 run that allowed the Hoosiers to build a 27-17 lead with 9:11 to go in the first half.

Then, after Hammons was called for his third foul with 4:18 left, Zeller scored six points in a 13-0 run that extended the margin to 47-25. Purdue finally ended a scoring drought of more than 4 minutes with Johnson's layup. But that only got the Boilermakers within 47-27 at halftime.

Zeller opened the second half with a tip-in, then posted up for a dunk with 16:02 to go to make it 53-33. Indiana clinched it with a 14-1 run midway through the second half, and the Boilermakers never got closer than 26 again.

Gamecocks swamped by Gators in 75-36 rout

Wire reports

Kenny Boynton and Mike Rosario scored 15 points apiece and No. 4 Florida dominated another Southeastern Conference opponent, drubbing South Carolina 75-36 Wednesday night.

The Gators, who won their ninth game in a row, led 33-10 at halftime and made their first five shots after the break. They opened a 31-point lead that seemingly couldn't get any more lopsided.

Then it did.

Florida (17-2, 7-0 SEC) pulled ahead 55-15 on Scottie Wilbekin's floater in the lane with 12:32 remaining.

■ Michigan 68, Northwestern 46: Trey Burke had 18 points and eight assists, and No. 1 Michigan was nearly flawless at the start Wednesday night en route to a 68-46 victory over Northwestern.

The Wolverines made 10 of their first 11 shots and went the entire first half without a turnover. They didn't commit a foul, either, until the final minute of the half.

■ Notre Dame 65, Villanova 60: Cameron Biedscheid scored a season-high 18 points, 15 in the second half, and Jack Cooley added 17 points and 16 rebounds to lead Notre Dame to a 65-60 win over Villanova on Wednesday night.

After going 1 of 2 from 3-point range in the first half, Biedscheid was 4 of 5 in the second. Overall, the Fighting Irish (17-4, 5-3 Big East) were 9 of 21 from 3-point range.

■ Duke 75, Wake Forest 70: Mason Plumlee scored a career-high 32 points and No. 5 Duke held off Wake Forest 75-70 on Wednesday night.

Seth Curry added 21 points, including a tie-breaking 3-pointer in the final minutes for the Blue Devils (18-2, 5-2 Atlantic Coast Conference).

■ Kansas State 83, Texas 57: Thomas Gipson had 17 points off the bench, Angel Rodriguez added 11 points and eight assists, and No. 18 Kansas State routed Texas 83-57 on Wednesday night to snap a two-game skid.

Harbaughs have an idea of what to expect

By Brett Martel
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Jack and Jackie Harbaugh are spending Super Bowl week celebrating the good fortune of having two sons at the pinnacle of pro football.

Once the Super Bowl between John Harbaugh's Baltimore Ravens and Jim Harbaugh's San Francisco 49ers has ended this Sunday night, the parents know their first priority will be expressing sympathy to the coach who didn't get to hoist the Lombardi Trophy.

"The one thing that I do think about is after the game. There is going to be one winner and there is going to be one that is going to be totally disappointed. My thoughts go to that one that will not experience the thrill of victory," Jack Harbaugh said. "That's where our thoughts will be."

Harbaugh explained that he and Jackie had a "dry run" on how to handle the post-game last season when the Niners lost at Baltimore on Thanksgiving night.

After leaving an office in the stadium where they watched the game — in private and emotionless — the first locker room they walked past was that of the Ravens.

"We've all experienced that excitement of victory-guys jumping up and down, the smile on John's face. They were just ecstatic. ... Then you realize that you're not needed here," Jack said. "You walk across the hall, and you went into the 49ers locker room and you walked and you saw the players walking about — that look in their eyes, that look of not being successful and coming up short. We opened up a couple doors and finally saw Jim all by himself in this room, just a table and a chair. He was still in his coaching outfit. His head down in his hands and you looked into his eyes and you realized that this where you're needed as a parent.

"Every single parent can identify with that," he continued. "On Sunday night, we're going to experience both of those great emotions. Our thoughts will be with the one that comes up a little short."

Now comes the second act in New Orleans, which happens to be the home of another set of parents who can relate to watching NFL games involving two of their sons on opposing teams: the Mannings.

As it turns out, Jack Harbaugh said, Archie Manning called before the Niners-Ravens Thursday night tilt last season to offer some advice. "The advice was this, 'This will be over on Friday. I promise you it will be over on Friday,'" Harbaugh recalled. "Sure enough it was great advice and that's exactly how it happened."

The elder Harbaugh was a longtime coach himself, and a former assistant of Bo Schembechler at Michigan, where Jim quarterbacked before a playing career in the NFL, followed by a college coaching career and then his NFL head coaching debut just last season in San Francisco.

Jack credited Jackie for taking their sons to Michigan practices when they were young so they could learn about what their father did during long days at work. And he was thrilled that they wanted to play and later coach football.

Now that has put them in the spotlight in the Big Easy, where the Harbaugh parents were fittingly at ease as they sat — talk show style — in lounge chairs in front of a large crowd of international media.

Jack opened the news conference by loudly asking, rhetorically, "Who has it better than us?"

Then he and Jackie both exclaimed, "Nobody!"

Dr. Phil: Te'o was victim of bad girlfriend hoax

By Tom Coyne
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Dr. Phil McGraw says Ronaiah Tuiasosopo, who masterminded the dead girlfriend hoax involving Manti Te'o, told him the Notre Dame linebacker was not involved in the scheme and that he ended up falling "deeply, romantically" in love with the football player.

McGraw spoke on the "Today" show Wednesday, previewing an interview he did with Tuiasosopo, a 22-year-old California man who created the fictional woman Te'o knew as Lennay Kekua. Tuiasosopo's interview with McGraw will air in two parts on the "Dr. Phil Show" starting Thursday.

Since the hoax was revealed earlier this month, Te'o has said the relationship with Kekua started online and eventually became serious, even though the two only talked on the phone and exchanged electronic messages, never meeting in person. Te'o said he was told of Kekua's "death" from leukemia just hours after his grandmother died in September.

McGraw said Tuiasosopo told him the voice of Kekua was his. Tuiasosopo and Te'o have each said that while the Kekua relationship went on for several years, there were times when they weren't in contact.

"There were many times where Manti and Lennay had broken up. But something would bring them back together whether it was something going on in his life, or in Lennay's life, in this case in my life," Tuiasosopo said.

Tuiasosopo said he wanted to end the relationship between Kekua and Te'o before he had to fake Kekua's death.

"I wanted to end it because everything I had gone through, I finally realized that I just had to move on with my life and I had to get me, Ronaiah, I had to start just living and let this go," Tuiasosopo said.

A-Rod troubles frustrate Yanks

■ He's gone from All-Star to annoyance

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Alex Rodriguez was speaking on a conference call.

"A huge debacle," he said. "Distasteful."

That was on Dec. 13, 2007, when he re-signed with the New York Yankees and was discussing his decision 1½ months earlier to become a free agent.

Now those words describe how some in the team's front office feel about A-Rod's $275 million, 10-year contract.

Once considered a player who could shatter the career home run record, Rodriguez has transformed from All-Star to annoyance for some in the Yankees organization. He hasn't played a full season since he was voted his third AL MVP award in 2007, he's out for at least the first half of this year following hip surgery on Jan. 16 and now he's been accused of again receiving performance-enhancing drugs — an allegation he denies.

Even before the charges were published Tuesday by the alternative weekly Miami New Times along with accusations against Melky Cabrera, Nelson Cruz, Gio Gonzalez, Bartolo Colon and Yasmani Grandal, some Yankees executives were wishing Rodriguez would just go away. Speaking on condition of anonymity because the team isn't publicly commenting on A-Rod's latest troubles, they revealed their frustration with the slugger.

And they have a big incentive for A-Rod to disappear. If he doesn't play again due to a career-ending injury, about 85 percent of the $114 million he's owed by the team would be covered by insurance, according to one of the executives who spoke on condition of anonymity.

New York also might be able to free itself from having the $27.5 million average annual value of Rodriguez's contract count in its luxury tax payroll in each of the next five seasons, a key factor as the Yankees try to get under the $189 million threshold in 2014.

If Rodriguez is on the disabled list, his contract is included. But if he's on the voluntary retired list, it would not be part of the total.

And if the Yankees fall under that $189 million benchmark, their luxury tax rate would drop from its current 50 percent to 17.5 percent for 2015. That would give them far more flexibility to pursue pitchers Clayton Kershaw, Felix Hernandez and Justin Verlander if they become free agents following the 2014 season.

New York is not likely to be able to void A-Rod's deal. Baseball's drug agreement between management and the players' association specifies the commissioner's office has all disciplinary authority for violations.

A-Rod's poor health, however, may provide the path to savings for the team.

While Rodriguez rebounded from right hip surgery in March 2009 to help the Yankees to their first World Series title since 2000, Dr. Bryan Kelly said recovery from his operation on A-Rod's left hip this month will be more complex if for no other reason than it receives more stress because Rodriguez is a right-handed hitter.

Even before the latest kerfuffle, A-Rod seemed to have worn out his welcome.

Yankees management tired of spotting him on the gossip pages with Madonna, Kate Hudson, Cameron Diaz and Torrie Wilson. They bristled when he was seen with a stripper in Toronto, at a swingers' club in Dallas and at an illegal poker club in New York.

Pain Management

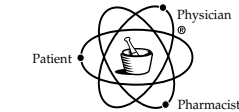

By Jed Dunaway, RPh., Mike Farmer, RPh., and Ginny Sue Floyd, RPh.

Up to 20% of the adult population experiences chronic pain, and neuropathic pain affects 3-8% of the population. Burning, aching, or shooting neuropathic pain is often associated with sensory changes which can be particularly severe and disabling. Ongoing pain can be a personally devastating and costly condition. Preparations are often prescribed and can be compounded to contain multiple medications that work in different ways to relieve pain. By combining various drugs which utilize different mechanisms to alter the sensation of pain, smaller doses of each medication can be used and side effects may be reduced. Many types of pain respond well topical medications, but the benefit is dependent on the formulation and base that is used. Ask our compounding pharmacist about customized medications to relieve chronic pain.

COMMODITIES

Commodities were up across the board Wednesday, spurred by a lackluster economic report and signs that the government will continue to keep borrowing cheap.
Silver for March delivery jumped 99.3 cents, more than 3 percent, to $32.17 per ounce. Gold for April delivery rose $18.90, more than 1 percent, to $1,681.60 per ounce.
That contrasted with stocks, as all major U.S. indexes ended lower. Investors fretted about a government report showing the U.S. economy unexpectedly shrank in the fourth quarter.

A plodding economy means the Federal Reserve is more likely to keep interest rates down, to make borrowing cheap and spur growth. When that happens some investors worry about inflation and pile into gold for protection.
The Fed confirmed its commitment to buying bonds and keeping interest rates exceptionally low on Wednesday afternoon, at the end of its two-day policy meeting.
Gold and other precious metals have languished as stocks rose to levels not seen in years. But for gold on Wednesday "the negative turned into a positive," said George Gero, vice president at RBC Capital Markets Global Futures.

Though gold and silver often trade in the same direction, silver's moves can be bigger by percentage, a pattern that held on Wednesday. It's much cheaper to buy silver, and that makes its price more volatile.

Other metals were also up. March copper climbed 5.85 cents, more than 1 percent, to $3.75 per pound. March palladium rose $1.65 to $751.40 per ounce. April platinum was up $10.40 to $1,689.30 per ounce.

Prices for key crops ended higher. Wheat rose 10 cents, more than 1 percent, to $7.87 per bushel. Corn was up 10.75 cents, also more than 1 percent, to $7.4025 per bushel. Soybeans climbed 27 cents, almost 2 percent, to $14.7875 per bushel.

Benchmark crude oil rose 37 cents to finish at $97.94 per barrel. Natural gas for March delivery picked up 7.7 cents to end at $3.34 per 1,000 cubic feet. Heating oil rose nearly a penny, to finish at $3.12 a gallon, and wholesale gasoline for March delivery rose 6 cents to end the day at $3.03 a gallon.

CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE

CHICAGO — Grains futures rose Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.
Wheat for March delivery rose 10 cents to $7.87 a bushel; March corn added 10.75 cents to $7.4025 a bushel; March oats rose 2 cents to $3.62 a bushel; while March soybeans jumped 27 cents to $14.7875 a bushel.
Beef and pork futures were mixed on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.
February live cattle fell 0.27 cent to $1.28 a pound; March feeder cattle rose 0.28 cent to $1.4910 a pound; February lean hogs were unchanged at 87.10 cents a pound.

Health & Medicine

This tiny pill could put your doctor out of business by 2014!

Florida company develops what experts call “The end of medicine” - Could this be the last time you suffer from joint discomfort, stomach disorders, and other chronic conditions? Experts say YES! Here’s why...

By Stephanie Wechsler,
Freelance Health Editor;

The most spectacular news in decades started with a simple thought... “Imagine a world where almost nobody gets sick... Now, stop imagining --- it’s not too far away!”

If anybody else made that statement, they’d be laughed at. However, when Dr. Earl Mindell (dubbed “America’s most trusted pharmacist”) revealed this startling news, his words hit like an Atom Bomb.

“As if that wasn’t enough, exclaimed Dr. Mindell, now, you might actually add an additional 12-to-25 years to your life. Let me explain”...

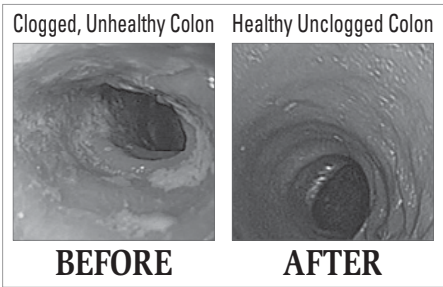

A hushed silence fell over the crowd as he unveiled a remarkable new formula --- destined to change the face of medicine forever.

“They call it BactiPlus. And it could be the most important discovery since penicillin”. So how does BactiPlus work?

Death Begins In The Colon:

“Before I go on, says Dr. Mindell, you need to understand why you get sick in the first place. Your health problems start in your colon!”

The reason is, your colon is your natural barrier against sickness. And since it stores a whopping 67% of your immune cells, it’s vital you keep your colon clean and toxin-free (or suffer the consequences).

BEFORE AFTER

Warning! Don’t Read This If You Have A Weak Stomach!

Here are the facts... over the years, you store 15 to 25-Lbs. of putrid, rotting fecal matter in your gut. Chances are, your colon is bulging with it. Add to that, food additives, pesticides, preservatives and other chemicals. And before you know it, you’re clogged up with toxic waste... full of bad bacteria, parasites and worms that ends up leaking into your bloodstream. Havoc ensues...

There’s only one way around it. You must cleanse your colon thoroughly of the bacteria that causes extreme havoc to your health. A clean colon will give the most powerful support to your health imaginable. And could even help add more than a decade to your life!

“I examined the research. It was indisputable”, said Dr. Mindell. “I’m now convinced. If every American supplemented their diet with the ingredients inside Bacti-Plus, 90% of hospitals would shut down ... and doctors would be scrounging for work”.

Biggest Medical News In Decades

That’s because BactiPlus’ potent ingredients actually help your body wipe-out viruses, toxins and bad bacteria... before they ruin your health. Even more shocking --- if you struggle with your health now, you could begin to reverse the problem overnight!

Look it up online. You’ll find dozens of studies about how it’s ingredients help keep you virtually immune to some very serious health concerns...

Experts agree; now you can live without joint discomfort, stomach problems-- and toxic attacks on your heart and vital organs.

“For the second time in 40-years... I put my name behind a product. BactiPlus is proven. Nothing even comes close. BactiPlus helps your body heal itself”.

-Dr. Earl Mindell

Advice

Vegetarian doesn't want to burden wedding hosts

Dear Amy: I've been invited to multiple friends' weddings this summer. Currently, I am receiving requests for reception dinner preferences with the choice of meat, fish, or a vegetarian option consisting of pasta. Unfortunately, I am a gluten-free vegetarian. Most of my friends are aware of my aversion to meat. However, not all of them know that I am gluten-free due to health reasons. Knowing that the couples are already under a lot of stress, I would like to avoid inconveniencing them with my dietary restrictions.

I would prefer to eat in my hotel room beforehand, but I would hate for them to pay for a plated meal that I cannot have. I do not want to offend anyone by attending the dinner but declining the meal. Bringing my own food to a reception seems a bit tacky as well. I thought of writing a request for just "a plate of vegetables" on the meal card, but I do not know if this is rude or too much of a burden. I will be traveling from out of town to attend these weddings, so skipping the reception is not an option. How do I share in the nuptial celebrations without troubling anyone? — Wedding Food Blues

Dear Blues: I ran your letter past Mollie Katzen, author of "The New Moosewood Cookbook," (2000, Ten Speed Press), whose work helped popularize vegetarian cuisine in the United States.

Katzen says that you could probably enjoy a perfectly good gluten-free vegetarian dinner composed entirely of the side dishes offered to other guests. She responded, "You should let the hosts know that you have a simple request for dinner and ask them if they would prefer that you go through them or communicate it directly to the caterer. If you stress that it's a simple, one-sentence request (I'd like my dinner to be an assortment of lacto-ovo vegetarian, wheat-free side dishes.) I think the hosts won't mind passing that along. Plus, the caterer will appreciate knowing. It will make her/his job much more straightforward." I want to add that once this request is made, you should let it stand. Do not follow up or make another inquiry. If at the event your meal does not arrive, do not worry the couple about it and simply do your best to deal with what you're served. Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Jan. 31): When you know why you are doing something, the rest is a no-brainer. This year you answer the "why" question in many areas of your life, starting with your central relationships. You'll seal a deal in February. There's family healing and collective victory in the spring. Someone rich helps you take a professional leap in May. Aries and Sagittarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 16, 1, 13, 5 and 9.
ARIES (March 21-April 19): Why do the actions of your loved ones affect your self-image? Because your identity is entangled in your various roles. But who you are is really bigger than how they see you — food for thought.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are fortunate, and you know that. Now, if you could only stop yourself from being so critical of all the bounty around you. Well, someone has to be the minister of quality control.
GEMINI (May 21-June 21): A secret burns on your tongue, and your social environment provides just the lightness and comfort level that may inspire you to spill it, no big deal. But tomorrow, the skies will change. So resist telling with all your might!
CANCER (June 22-July 22): When you didn't know the rules, you did whatever you wanted, and it all worked out fine, more or less. Now you know the rules, and things seem suddenly difficult. Chill out. Don't think about it so much. Take a break.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your loved ones may not seem to appreciate you, but the contribution you make to their lives matters more than you know. Do a private accounting of it, because that will make you feel good about yourself.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It's difficult to pinpoint exactly what makes you fall in love with someone. The recipe for romance is as complex as a chocolate soufflé, and all of the elements have to work together for the thing to take delicious form.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): There is whimsy even in the most conservative aspects of your life. With the moon highlighting your artistic influence on others, you'll be surprised at how some people act to impress you.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21): Carried by the conviction of your dreams, you'll be tempted to take on huge endeavors with only a few crude tools. Truly, you can do better. Put the word out. You need a team!
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You used to have playtime every day when you were a child. Now it seems rather limited, but it's every bit as important. Fight for your right to recreate.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Venus will leave your sign tomorrow, taking someone's expectations with her. Focused on your own desire to succeed, succeed you will, regardless of what anyone wants from you.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The moon in your fellow air sign poses a question about your personal life: Should you seize the day and the love it offers, or hold out for the love you really want?
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may feel lost in a sea of options. You usually prefer to feel your way through difficult problems instead of weighing your opportunities on the scale of intellect. Tomorrow brings clarity.

Wine stains best handled immediately after spill

Dear Heloise: Help! I had a party, and now I have red-wine stains on my beige-colored carpet. Is there anything I can do? Lorraine D., via email
Dear Lorraine: In your case, at this point, it is best to use a commercial stain remover. In the future, as soon as the spill happens, blot up as much of the wine as you can. Then mix a solution of 1 part mild liquid dishwashing detergent and 20 parts water. With a clean microfiber cloth, blot the stain until color stops coming out. Then take half-vinegar/half-water and blot the stain to get the last remnants of color out. If you still see the red color, put a 3 to 5 percent hydrogen peroxide on a cloth and blot. As always, try out a hidden area of carpet first to make sure you won't fade the color. Finally, rinse with cold water, blot dry and then allow to air-dry. This is another reason to keep vinegar in your household. — Heloise

Send a money-saving or timesaving hint to Heloise, P.O. Box 795000, San Antonio, TX 78279-5000, or you can fax it to 1-210-HELOISE or email it to Heloise@Heloise.com.

No luck involved; God is protecting you

Dear Rev. Graham: I've had at least three close calls in the last few years (two bad auto wrecks, one heart attack) and my friends say it's a miracle I'm still alive. What is God trying to tell me, if anything? Or have I just been lucky? — M.W.
Dear M.W.: No, you haven't been just "lucky," nor was what happened to you a matter of chance. Instead, God has been watching over you and delivering you from death — and He had a reason for doing so. What was His reason? Surely it was to give you another opportunity to face your need of Him and then commit your life to Jesus Christ as your Lord and Savior. You aren't just a body and a mind; you also have a soul or spirit that God gave to you. When you die, your body and mind will come to an end, but your spirit will live on forever, either with God in heaven or in that place of absolute loneliness and despair the Bible calls hell. Only one thing will keep us out of heaven, and that is our sin. But God has provided the way for us to be cleansed of our sins so we can enter heaven — and that way is Jesus Christ. He was without sin, but all our sins were placed on Him, and He became the final and perfect sacrifice for our sins. Don't gamble with your soul; don't turn your back on what God is trying to tell you. Instead, by a simple prayer of faith repent of your sins and ask Christ to come into your life, trusting Him alone for your eternal salvation. The Bible says that God "is patient with you, not wanting anyone to perish, but everyone to come to repentance" (2 Peter 3:9). Anti-inflammatories, soft cushion can ease tailbone pain

Dear Dr. Roach: I have pain in my tailbone area and have had a colonoscopy and two pelvic CT scans, but nothing was found. Is there a specialist I can see, and do you have any suggestions? — J.B.
Dear J.B.: It sounds as though you may have coccydynia, which simply means "pain" (dynia) in the "tailbone" (coccyx). It's usually associated with abnormal movement of the coccyx on the spine. This is generally treated by an orthopedic surgeon or pain-management specialist. Treatment includes not sitting on hard surfaces, using a specialized orthopedic cushion and the use of anti-inflammatories. Very severe cases may require surgery. Dear Dr. Roach: My daughter has soreness and clicking in her jaw. She said it locked up. She says she can't chew food normally anymore. The dentist referred her to an oral surgeon, but he wants $5,000 to treat her (including physical therapy and an appliance). What should I do? — R.C.

Dear R.C.: It sounds like your daughter has a moderately severe case of TMJ syndrome. TMJ stands for "temporomandibular joint," which is the source of the pain and other problems. Common causes of TMJ pain include tooth grinding at night, which is very common; arthritis in the TMJ; dental problems, which cause the person to overuse the non-affected side; and stress, which may cause clenching of the facial and jaw muscles.

Treatment appropriate for everybody with TMJ pain includes application of an ice pack followed by a warm compress, eating softer foods, careful chewing with up-and-down and not side-to-side movement, and avoiding chewing gum. Anti-inflammatory medications such as ibuprofen also may be helpful. A visit to the dentist is essential to make sure there are no dental issues that need to be corrected. Physical therapy may be useful for some people, especially if the conservative measures above haven't done the job. But the appliance the oral surgeon recommended has been very effective for many people. However, $5,000 sounds like it's out of the range of reasonable. Find another TMJ specialist. Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Inauguration trip is 'experience of a lifetime'

By Danielle Crafton
Special to The Gleaner

As Henderson County High School and South Middle School students set out on an adventure to Washington, D.C., for the presidential inauguration and a seven-day excursion to historic monuments and sites, 93 students plus 10 chaperones were preparing themselves for an experience of a lifetime.

For the past 26 years, former Henderson County school employees Mac Grace and Jim Stocking, coordinators of the Student Travel Education Program, or S.T.E.P., have organized and led trips to not only Washington, D.C., but also to New York City, Philadelphia, Las Vegas, Huntsville, New Orleans, Chicago and Boston. The purpose of the program is to give students the opportunity to experience life outside of Henderson.

Driving through Louisville, Cincinnati and Columbus en route to the destination was the first time a handful of students traveled through a major city and have been away from home.

When asked what students expect in the next coming days, the following responses were among those given:

■ "I really enjoy history, and when I found out the field trip included touring the Ford Theatre where President Abraham Lincoln was assassinated, I was interested in attending. I watch movies which showcase the Ford Theatre, and now I get to see it in person. So I look forward to touring the Ford Theatre and museum," said Henderson County High School junior Kory Medcalf.

■ "History is in the making, and we get to see it," said Derby O'Nan, eighth-grade student from South Middle School. "Many people our age will never have the opportunity to do what we are doing. Seeing it on television is one thing, but being in the same place as the president of the United States is another."

■ Hannah Thrasher, a Henderson County High School senior, said, "This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to be a part of this trip. I may never have another chance to do this again. We live in such a great country and are very blessed. I think seeing the Holocaust Museum and seeing the horrors of that time will make me appreciate where I live now even more."

■ Jax Hagan, a South sixth-grader, said, "I wanted to go on the trip because it sounded fun. I want to see the Washington Monument because I heard you could see it from miles away and that it is very tall."

■ "I look forward to hearing the president's speech, but seeing former presidential monuments really interests me. Especially Abraham Lincoln's memorial because he gave one of the best-known speeches in American history and The Gettysburg Address," said Mason Gibson, a South eighth-grader.

The trip included the following tours and activities: Washington National Cathedral, Embassy Row, U.S. Capitol, Holocaust Museum, National Archives, Union Station, Washington Monument, World War II Monument, Korean Monument, Vietnam Memorial, Lincoln Monument, Jefferson Monument, Kennedy Center for Performing Arts, Smithsonian Natural History, Smithsonian Air and Space Museum, Smithsonian American History, Pentagon City Mall, Iwo Jima Monument, Arlington National Cemetery, JFK grave, Tomb of the Unknown

Henderson County was just one school district represented at the 57th Presidential Inauguration, which took place on Jan. 21. With big smiles and the anticipation of seeing the president of the United States, students truly embraced the atmosphere and the events which occurred during a historical moment in time.

According to CNN, 800,000 to 900,000 people attended President Barack Obama's second inauguration at the National Mall with the theme "Faith in America's Future." The Henderson group arrived at the Mall at approximately 9:30 a.m. to claim a spot to watch an unforgettable event.

HCHS seniors were provided tickets which allowed them to stand in the Gold Section of the Mall during the inaugural ceremonies, which started at 11:30 a.m. Upon arrival, volunteers greeted guests with enthusiasm.

Even though the subway at the Metro Station was overwhelmed with crowds of people, the Mall itself was not overcrowded. The remaining students and chaperones stood between the Washington Monument and the U.S. Capitol.

A musical prelude was conducted and heard throughout the Mall with loud speakers.

The event was projected on large screens for all to see, key for President Barack Obama's historic speech. Flags were given out to crowd members as people waved continuously with pride throughout the event.

CNN captured Henderson County Schools' pride by mentioning Henderson, Ky., in a live inauguration segment, scanning the group of students and chaperones wearing bright red unionized sweatshirts representing the 2013 inauguration.

Local media picked up on the story and highlighted students' reactions during the ceremonies.

"The event was filled with people as far as the eye could see. I have never seen that many people in my life," said Kaelin Hildreth, an HCHS senior.

HCHS junior Cassidy Carroll stated, "Where I was standing, the view was great. I truly took in the moment, from the music being played to the people greeting us when we arrived. The unity among everyone is something I will always cherish."

It was the unplanned moments each day that made the trip more adventurous. For example, Grace and student Zach Luntsford were walking behind the crowd one evening after touring the National Portrait Museum and stumbled upon a corner which was blocked by police officers. They were unable to cross the street because at that moment motorcycles and black SUVs drove by with flashing lights. To their amazement, President Barack Obama was traveling to one of the inaugural galas.

Another moment happened on the morning students were preparing to tour Arlington National Cemetery. They learned the charter bus driver was a former guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Ben Foster shared his personal experiences and demands as a guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier with the students. This gave students insight and realizations as to the importance of guarding the tomb.

Riding on the subway at the Metro Station was a story in itself. The majority of the Henderson people on the trip had never ridden on a subway, which turned out to be an educational experience. Students were able to access their own tickets as many locals witnessed and assisted with navigating through Washington, D.C.

Grace said the trip is well worth the efforts he and others put into it.

"We have adult volunteers who join us on our trips because they remember having a great experience themselves when they attended a S.T.E.P. trip as a student," said Grace. "To see generation after generation impacted from educational events is why I enjoy coordinating such field trips."

A trip such as this is more than just having a fun time with fellow peers outside of school; students learn firsthand about history and government outside of a textbook. They experience diversity and culture, budgeting tactics, building relationships/communication skills, awareness of various job opportunities, media coverage and a glimpse of studying abroad if they wish to do so in the future. In addition, most students do not realize how much learning and reading takes place day after day on the field trip while having so much fun.

To attend this year's

S.T.E.P. trip, students either participated in fundraising events or paid $475 per person. Their fare included hotel expenses, bus/logistical fees, admission tickets and breakfast/other meal expenses.

For those who could not raise this money, scholarships were offered by various local businesses and individual donors. A total of four scholarships were awarded this year.

The Henderson Breakfast Lions Club helped with scholarship efforts and the following companies donated snacks for the trip: Sureway Foods, Subway Sandwich Shop on Barret Boulevard, Wal-Mart, Dollar General Market and Fresh Market in Evansville.

Organizer Jim Stocking

said, "As Mac Grace and I grow older, we are hopeful that young teachers and staff will see the importance of the S.T.E.P. trips and step forward to continue making it available for future generations of Henderson County students."

Grace added, "We want to see S.T.E.P. trips continue and expand. However, it concerns Jim Stocking and me that it may not. With that said, we want to start training people that may look into taking over the program in the near future."

Chaperone Diane Jackson said, "With this being my eighth year as a chaperone, I find these trips very informative and enjoyable. Attending the S.T.E.P. trips gives me a chance to explore the United States of America and its beauty and history with the students. When the students return to Henderson County, they can share their knowledge and stories with other students and family members. With having the memories they acquired, students can now relate to things they may see on television or read in a magazine when it comes to various factors taking place in Washington, D.C. Also I want to add that I truly enjoy seeing the love Mac Grace and Jim Stocking have for these kids. It is just unbelievable. The two of them would do anything for anyone!"

"My grandson, Meric-Dean Stinson, asked me to go on this trip with him, and I could not pass up on an opportunity seeing monumental events with him," said chaperone Carolin Abbott.

She continued, "As a former elementary teacher for Henderson County Schools, I have gone on several school trips, and hearing people compliment our kids for good behavior is one of the most rewarding things. We are helping to mold our kids into young adults, and these trips help to do just that. It is such a learning experience because there are such new things students are embracing and depending on one another."

Students will present what they learned on the S.T.E.P. trip to their classmates and school administrators.

Those interested in attending future trips or those interested in making a donation should contact Grace at mac.grace@henderson.kyschools.us.

Rural areas may feel distant cities' heat

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Heat rising up from cities such as New York, Paris and Tokyo might be remotely warming up winters far away in some rural parts of Alaska, Canada, and Siberia, a surprising study theorizes.

In an unusual twist, that same urban heat from buildings and cars may be slightly cooling the autumns in much of the Western United States, Eastern Europe and the Mediterranean, according to the study published Sunday in the scientific journal Nature Climate Change.

Meteorologists long have known that cities are warmer than rural areas, with the heat of buildings and cars, along with asphalt and roofs that absorb heat. That's called the urban heat island effect and it's long been thought that the heat stayed close to the cities.

But the study, based on a computer model and the Northern Hemisphere, now suggests the heat does something else, albeit indirectly. It travels about half a mile up into the air and then its energy changes the high-altitude currents in the atmosphere that dictate prevailing weather.

"Basically, it changes the flow," said Guang Zhang of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography in La Jolla, Calif. He wrote the paper with Aixue Hu at the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo.

This doesn't change overall global temperature averages significantly, unlike man-made greenhouse gases that cause global warming. Instead it redistributes some of the heat, the scientists said.

The changes seem to vary with the seasons and by region because of the way air currents flow at different times of the year. During the winter, the jet stream is altered and weakened, keeping cold air closer to the Arctic Circle and from dipping down as sharply, Hu explained.

A cartoon illustration. At the top, a man in a plaid shirt and shorts stands on the edge of a dark, jagged cliff. He is holding a cell phone to his ear. A speech bubble from him says, "CAN YOU HANG ON WHILE I TAKE THIS CALL?". To his left, the words "BLEEP BLEEP" are written with radiating lines. Below him, a man in a plaid shirt and shorts hangs from a horizontal branch that extends from the cliff. The man hanging looks distressed. The background shows a simple horizon line with some clouds. In the bottom right corner, the text "GREG WALKER" is written.

BEST BETS

7 p.m. on 14 30 Rock

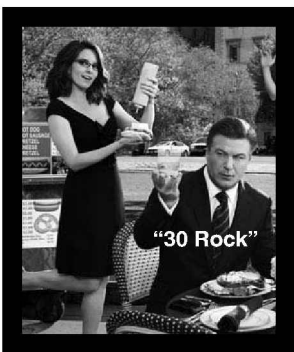

In the beginning, there were two NBC shows set behind the scenes of a fictional comedy series. One — the drama “Studio 60 on the Sunset Strip” — lasted only one season, but this one hit it big, earning 14 Emmys, six Golden Globes and a slew of other awards during its seven-season run. That run ends tonight, so tune in to see what happens to Liz and Jack (Tina Fey, Alec Baldwin) and the rest of the “TGS” gang as the curtain comes down.

7 p.m. on 6 NBA Basketball

The Western Conference takes center stage tonight in this TNT doubleheader, which tips off with this tilt in Oklahoma City between Kevin Durant’s Thunder and the Rudy Gay-led Memphis Grizzlies. Then in the night-cap, Dirk Nowitzki and the Dallas Mavericks visit Stephen Curry and the Golden State Warriors.

8 p.m. on 9 Space Shuttle Columbia: Mission of Hope

When Israeli astronaut Ilan Ramon boarded the ill-fated space shuttle Columbia on Jan. 16, 2003, he carried with him a Torah scroll that had survived the Holocaust. This new documentary explores the journey of the scroll, from prewar Europe to Israel to the United States and into space aboard Columbia, which disintegrated upon re-entry.

8:31 p.m. on 14 1600 Penn

Skip (Josh Gad) only makes things worse when he tries to defuse a tense situation with protesters opposing the president’s (Bill Pullman) transportation policies, forcing his father to run damage control. Emily (Jenna Elfman) tries to strengthen her relationship with Xander (Benjamin Stockham) by helping with his campaign for student body president.

Becca (Martha Maclsaac) tries to sort out her future in the new episode “Frost-ing/Nixon.”

9 p.m. on 4 Beyond Scared Straight

What rhymes with “What the heck was I thinking?” In this new episode, Nick, an aspiring rapper who thinks doing time behind bars will improve his rhymes, gets a wake-up call during his visit to a county lockup in Boston. So do Jesse, a stoner from the suburbs who thinks he’s just as tough as the city boys, and Glen, a football prodigy whose sticky fingers could derail his dreams of athletic stardom.

9 p.m. on 10 Suits

Harvey (Gabriel Macht) goes head to head against Robert Zane, Rachel’s (Meghan Markle) father, on a gender discrimination case that forces Rachel to confront her complicated relationship with her dad. Wendell Pierce guest stars in the new episode “Zane vs. Zane.”

9:01 p.m. on 14 Do No Harm

This new series stars Steven Pasquale as Dr. Jason Cole, a respected neurosurgeon with a deep, dark secret. Every night at the same hour, something inside Jason changes, leaving him almost unrecognizable — a seductive, devious, borderline sociopathic personality known as Ian Price. For years Jason has kept Ian in check with an experimental sedative. But Ian has developed a resistance to the serum. Phylicia Rashad and Alana De La Garza also star.

9:30 p.m. on 11 Everybody Loves Raymond

Being told young Michael (Sullivan Sweeten) may need to repeat prekindergarten is hard enough on Ray (Ray Romano). But when he learns that he was also left back as a child, he’s racked with guilt for giving his son the stupidity gene. Frank (Peter Boyle) takes matters into his own hands, visiting the school to try and talk Michael’s teacher into promoting him. Patricia Heaton also stars in “Left Back.”

10 p.m. on 44 Two and a Half Men

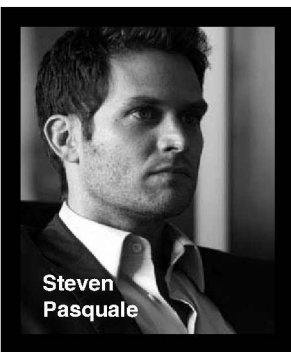

She’s baaack! Melanie Lynskey returned to the role of Rose, Charlie’s (Charlie Sheen) stalker, for this episode. Charlie and his new girlfriend, Linda (guest star Ming Wen), are growing closer, and consummation isn’t far off. But for some reason Charlie keeps seeing Rose’s face everywhere. Jon Cryer and Angus T. Jones also star in “City of Great Racks.”

10 p.m. on 13 Rachael vs. Guy Celebrity Cook-Off

Rico Rodriguez, aka Manny of “Modern Family,” is the guest judge as the remaining celebrity team members vie to throw the most kid-pleasing birthday party for one lucky girl and boy in the new episode “Picky Palates.”

10 p.m. on 2 Spartacus: War of the Damned

The epic, blood-drenched series begins its final season tonight with “Enemies of Rome,” as Spartacus (Liam McIntyre) leads his growing slave rebellion against the Roman Empire. Hot on his tail is legendary Gen. Marcus Crassus (Simon Merrells), who is out to squash the revolt and make an example out of it to others who would dare defy Rome.

10:30 p.m. on 6A Family Guy

Brian seeks romantic advice from Quagmire after striking out on a date, and they end up competing for the affections of each other’s exes: Cheryl Tiegs (guest voicing herself) and Jillian (guest voice Drew Barrymore). Peter loses it when the dry cleaner loses a beloved shirt in “Tiegs for Two.” Jessica Stroup (“90210”) also provides a guest voice.

Reckless Driving
 IS ONE PARTY YOU DON'T WANT TO CRASH

(There is no cheesy slogan to prevent reckless driving.)

(There is no spokesperson with a catchy phrase to remind the driver to slow down, stop eating, quit messing with the radio or pay attention to the road. There's Only You. Speak Up.)
